Welcome Lopes!

I'm thrilled and honored to invite you into Lope Country! Despite the unique challenges that the Coronavirus has brought to us all, I remain excited for you to join our vibrant student community here at Grand Canyon University. Although the time leading up to your college experience was different than how you imagined it, you are entering a new season of adventure and being led to be involved in something greater than you could have ever imagined. Along with advancing your formal education during these coming years, it is my hope that you enjoy a spiritually uplifting experience full of new opportunities. We invite you to embark on a life of purpose and to engage in countless student-led programs, as well as participate in a welcoming and unified student community.

Throughout your academic program, we believe you are taking the next steps in your journey of discovering your unique purpose and fulfilling the plans that God has in store for you. Be open to issues of faith and be intent on building a solid foundation of hope and optimism. You may be amazed at how God can use you to make an impact on campus, at home and throughout the world.

We tell new students that their experience is what they make it here at GCU and I encourage you to have a great time as you make friends and participate in the many student-led opportunities around campus. There are literally hundreds of programs throughout the year to intentionally create an engaging student community. They include Life Groups, community gatherings, Chapel services, volunteer programs, outdoor recreation trips, student clubs and more. If you are a commuter student, these programs are for you too! We're proud of our student life on campus and hope you consider joining our team of student leaders by applying for a leadership position in January.

One of our great joys at GCU is the atmosphere of unity among students, staff, faculty and quests. We admire the example set by our students when it comes to including their fellow Lopes and encouraging others to pursue their passions, achieve their goals and use their unique gifts to serve each other and the surrounding community.

We are grateful that you have chosen to join us in this mission.

Lopes Up!

GCU RESIDENT

Nervous about roommate issues? We are here to help!

Roommate relationships can be some of the most fulfilling of your college experience. However, discovering how to get along with new roommates in a small space will be challenging, especially if you have never shared a room before. Conflict is inevitable. Handling it effectively helps prepare you for successful relationships in college and bevond. We have a very specific, educational conflict resolution process that is used in campus housing university-wide.

1: Talk about the conflict and create a plan for resolution

- Get a roommate communication verification form from your RA
- Set up a time to speak with your roommates
- Identify the issues and create an action plan
- Put the action plan into practice for seven days

2: Schedule a conflict resolution meeting with your RA

- If major conflict still exists after seven days, your RA will facilitate a mediation with you and your roommate
- The mediation will involve open and honest conversation
- Together, revise your roommate agreement and practice for seven days
- Schedule a follow up meeting with your RA

3: Schedule a conflict resolution meeting your RD

- If severe conflict still exists after the follow-up meeting with your RA, your RA will recommend an RD mediation
- Your RD will email you to schedule a conflict resolution meeting
- Your RD will work with you and your roommates to determine the best course of action moving forward

Self-reflection Your actions may make the problem worse. Pay attention to your presence. What does your body language communicate? Avoid eye rolls and crossed arms.

Listen and clarify Listen to what your roommate is saying and clarify with questions like. "What I am hearing is that vou want me to take out the garbage once a week?"

Suggest solutions Suggest solutions and listen while your roommate does the same thing. You and your roommate don't have to be friends to live together.

CONFLICT RESOLUTION: Before you talk...

Perspective

Put yourself in your roommate's shoes. How would you approach this conflict if you were them?

State of mind

Prepare yourself to enter the mediation in a calm, solution-oriented state of mind. Reflect on how you have contributed to the conflict.

When you talk...

Find something to agree on. The conflict cannot be resolved until the issue is recoanized.

Agree

Ask questions Ask questions like, "Why is this bothering you?" to understand your roommate's perspective.

Tone of voice

Roommate conflict can be emotionally charged. Use statements like, "I feel frustrated when..." to talk about conflict.

Agree on next steps

Create a plan to prevent the same conflict from repeating. This will require flexibility and compromise. What will you do if a different conflict arises?

Check in

Ask intentional questions like, "Was I making too much noise last night?" Encourage each other to communicate as you learn to live together.

STUDENT CONDUCT

As an office within Residence Life, we support the educational mission of the university by upholding the community standards. The student conduct process is a fair and informal educational process designed to promote an educational environment and develop students to be a part of the global community.

For more information about the community standards, visitation privileges, alcohol and drug policies and more, refer to the community standards in the University Policy Handbook.

GETTING INVOLVED Hello New Lopes!

My name is Dylan Mahoney and I am honored to serve as your ASGCU Student Body President for the 2020-21 academic vear.

You are officially a Lope; welcome to the family! I am very inspired and excited by your choice to further your academic pursuits at Grand Canvon University. This new adventure you're about to embark upon can be intimidating but you will soon find that GCU is truly a university unlike any other. The opportunities you will receive and memories you will make here will last a lifetime. As you enter this new and uncertain season of life, my hope is that you'll find confidence knowing that the university you are attending cares for you deeply and is committed to your success both on and off campus. Moreover, I hope you find that what has been built here isn't just a school but your home.

Reflecting on my own freshman experience, there are several things I've learned that I would like to pass on to you. This is a unique and formative time for everyone; know that there are thousands of students amongst you experiencing the same array of feelings. Understanding this is crucial during this time of transition and in building a supportive community amongst you. Don't be afraid to step outside your comfort zone. You will have the chance to encounter many different types of people, experiences and opportunities to supplement your areas of passion and study. I encourage all of you to take full advantage of all the doors that GCU will open for you. We have some of the greatest communities and opportunities in the nation whether it's joining one of our many clubs or intramural sports, being a part of our famous Havocs student section at the sports games, or getting plugged in with a campus ministry and/or the amazing local churches that Phoenix has to offer.

In addition to all of the ways to get involved in the campus community. I also encourage you to take advantage of the wealth of resources provided by the university. Here you will find opportunities to sharpen your intellect both in and out of the classroom as well as strengthening vour leadership abilities. Consider applying for Freshman Class Council (the only leadership opportunity offered for freshmen) or visiting one of the Academic and Career Excellence Centers which is great place to seek career and internship information that will prepare you for life post-grad. If you prefer a more adventurous outlet, our incredible Outdoor Recreation program provides countless opportunities to go on trips with your peers and explore all the natural beauty that Arizona has to offer.

If I could leave you with one thing it would be this: being a GCU student is a privilege and a blessing. No matter how you decide to spend your time here, my prayer is that you find a great community of faith and fellowship, build lifelong friendships, make lasting memories and come to find the very same joy and love that I have found in the university.

Dvlan Mahonev

I look forward to meeting you and serving you this year!
